The Synod was thus opened on April 9, 1438, being Wednesday in Holy Week, with The Synod Hymns, Prayers, and Addresses, but withAprifg out any public Celebration of the Liturgy. r438-The Preliminaries having been thus disposed of, and Easter being passed, the Latins were anxious to begin with the main question at issue; but the Greeks urged that the majority of the Western Bishops were still at Basel, and wished to await their arrival. They agreed however, that, in the meantime, selected advocates, twelve from each side, should discuss the question of Purgatory and other subjects in which the Churches differed. These discussions lasted from June 4 to July 17. Meanwhile no one had come from Basel: a plague had broken out, and Dionysius of Sardis died. The Greeks were much disheartened, and in the absence of the Fathers at Basel they feared they should be outvoted. There was however no help for it: the summer was passing, and it was agreed that the debate on the Procession should begin without further delay. Yet it was not till October 8 that the First Session really commenced. Session I. 88. The Pope being sick, the Synod Oct. 8. was held in Chapel of his Palace, the arrangement being as shown below....
