Not illustrated. 1838 Excerpt: . information respecting the moral condition of the country, ordered a Statistical Return to be the number of persons charged with criminal offences, and tried before the Civil Tribunal. This Return, which is published annually, shows, in distinct rubrics, the number of persons indicted, acquitted, or convicted, as well as the nature of offences committed in each indicating at the same time the punishment awarded by the laws. It further states the sex of the criminals, and whether they are natives or foreigners; and it includes Denmark, the Islands, Iceland, and the Danish West Indies, not, however, comprising Sleswick-Holstein. The first Return was made for the year 1828, and it is from these materials that I have formed nine Tables, embracing the septennial period from 1828 to 1834; and I have endeavoured to arrange them in such a manner as to afford a greater facility in comparing the state of Denmark with that both in England and France. According to the General Summary of the Criminal Returns (Table I.) the total number of persons charged with crimes and offences in Denmark, during the period above stated, amounted to 12,012, of which 977 cases were left in suspense, being about 140 at the end of each year; over 32 cases were dismissed, and 1,851 persons were acquitted, by which the number of demerits is reduced to 9,152. Hence it results, that, of 100 persons indicted in Denmark acquitted, although the single provinces show great discrepancies, as will appear from the...
