Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Journal of the Galway Archaeological and Historical Society, Vol. 4 The subject of my paper refers to a district which comprises a considerable portion of Hy Fiachrach Aidhne. Prince Fiachrach son of Awley, King of Connaught, and father of Dathy the last and perhaps the most famous of our Pagan provincial Kings gave his name to this district, as well as to another in the north of Mayo known as Fiachrach of the Moy. The chieftains of this district traced their descent with pardonable pride from Dathy and Fiachrach through Guaire the hospitable King of Connaught, who holds in our songs and legends a position similar to that which the good King Arthur of Avallon held in the south west of Britain. For a considerable time the O Clerys held the distinguished rank of Chiefs of Southern Hy Fiachrach. But early in the eleventh century we find that they were superseded in the office by the O Heynes, another prominent branch of the same sept.
