Alinea Editrice, 2009. Book Condition: new. A cura di Romano Del Nord. English text. Firenze, 2009; paperback, pp. 360, b/w and col. ill., cm 17x24. TESIS was founded in 1992 thanks to an agreement among a group of professors from three important Italian Universities ("La Sapienza" in Rome; the University of Florence and the Polytechnic of Milan University). It is one of the first institutions based on a scientific partnership between universities in the field of healthcare architecture. The establishment of the Tesis Center originates from stable relationships between professors and researchers that have long been working on researches and education on themes concerning the systems and technologies for healthcare facilities. The development and the systematization of criteria, methodologies and tools aimed at optimizing the characteristics of buildings and their related equipments as well as of the healthcare services supplied, are specific goals of the Tesis Center. They are meant to be achieved through researches concerned with the whole process: from the phases of programming, designing and building to the phase of the facility management. TESIS is located in Florence, inside the Department of Architectural Technologies and Design "Pier Luigi Spadolini" of the University of Florence.
